Name – The NWCCHT is currently a program of the community Agriculture Alliance. The program has a very engaged steering committee, of which the Helen Roger and Richard Rhoades continue to participate with past Rifle Chamber marketing staff member Kacey Beres participating prior to her departure. Efforts to engage new chamber representation will be made this fall. A strategic goal for the program is to work toward an independent 501c3 charitable organization with a focus on education. Organizational development efforts are ongoing at this time. It is anticipated this will be accomplished by the end of 2014 or early in 2015. Attached is a complete list of the Community Agriculture Alliance Board of directors and Advisors and a sampling of the regional steering committee for NWCCHT.

energy trail

Douglas Pass Energy Trail:
Paralleling the Canyon Pintado Journey, this trail reveals the story of oil in Colorado. In the 1930s, oilmen drilled over a mile down to a vast pocket of trapped oil measuring ten miles long and five miles wide.

Roan Plateau Energy Trail:
The world's largest known source of oil shale was deposited 50 million years ago in an area north of Rifle. It is estimated that 1.8 trillion barrels of oil exists within the shale of the Roan Cliff area.

Axial to Yampa River Energy Trail:
Traveling north on Hwy 13 to Craig you enter coal mining territory. This "black gold" enticed miners to the region beginning in the 1870s. Today, coal still supplies the state's energy needs as do the oil fields just south of the town of Milner.

North Park Energy Trail:
Glacial meltwater carved rock terraces and faults in the North Park basin, which trapped oil. The first oil well was drilled in the 1920s west of Walden. Named McCallum Field, this drill site has accounted for more than half the oil production in North Park.

BOUNDLESS LANDSCAPES & SPIRITED PEOPLE

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS

community legacy

This remote northwest region of Colorado had long-served as the Ute Indians' summertime hunting grounds. Later, trappers and mountain men pursued small game to sell the hides to the fur traders. Legend has it that French fur trappers thought the spring along the Yampa River sounded like a steamboat.

In 1875 James Crawford arrived with his family to file a homestead claim and establish what would become the town of Steamboat Springs. Rugged homesteaders soon followed to raise cattle or sheep. Others established businesses or worked in the nearby gold and coal mines.

The town remained isolated until the arrival of the Denver, Northwest and Pacific Railroad in 1908. The rail line from Denver across the Continental Divide enabled year-round transportation of livestock and coal as well as passenger travel. Today, the railroad still transports coal from the region.

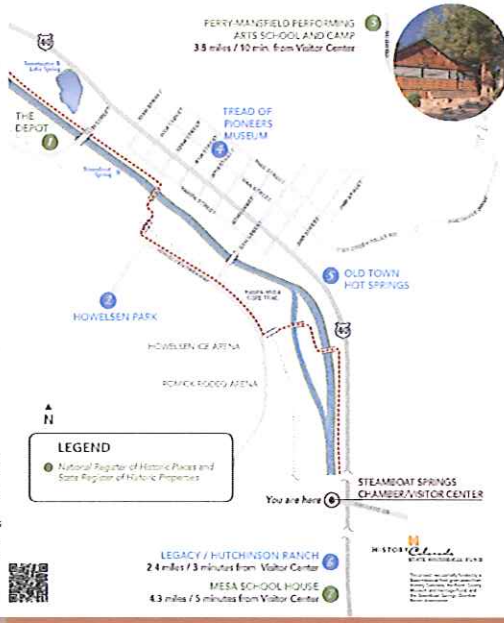
1 Eleanor Bliss Center for the Arts at the Depot 1001 13th Street

By 1913 the Steamboat Springs' Depot was the largest cattle shipping center in the country. Placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1978, "The Art Depot" is now a thriving art and community center where you can enjoy exhibits, classes, and performances.

2 Howelsen Park
Howelsen Parkway

This City Park includes the oldest operating ski hill in Colorado and is named for Norwegian ski champion, Carl Howelsen, who introduced the community to ski jumping and recreational skiing. The all-season sports complex is home to the Steamboat Springs Winter Sports Club, a training organization for aspiring and Olympic athletes.



3 Perry-Mansfield Performing Arts School and Camp
40755 County Road 36

Charlotte Perry and Portia Mansfield's dream of creating a theatre and dance camp in the mountains of Steamboat Springs was fulfilled in 1915. Today, the School and Camp is recognized as the oldest continuously operating performing arts school and camp in the nation.

4 Tread of Pioneers Museum
800 Oak Street

Set in a 1908 Queen Anne-style Victorian home, the Museum engages visitors in exploring the region's legacy of Native Americans, ranching, mining, and pioneers. Trace the history of skiing, ski jumping, and Olympic heritage in Steamboat Springs in our Ski Town U.S.A.® exhibit.

5 Old Town Hot Springs
136 Lincoln Avenue

The Ute Indians, who summered in the valley long before the arrival of settlers, believed the area's natural mineral springs had healing and spiritual powers. Pioneers enjoyed the "heart spring" and its 103-degree waters as early as 1875. Old Town Hot Springs has provided locals and visitors a place to rejuvenate and relax for over 100 years.

6 Legacy / Hutchinson Ranch
35435 Highway 40

The 130-acre ranch preserves the high country farming and ranching history of northwest Colorado. This ranch has been operating and intact since 1899 and continues to demonstrate a time-honored way of life.

7 Mesa Schoolhouse
33985 Highway 40

Built in 1916, the school served grades one through eight until rural school district consolidation was complete in 1959. The Schoolhouse was restored in 2000 with the support of Historic Routt County and gifted to the City of Steamboat Springs for use as a community meeting center.

working landscape: ranching and rodeos

Open-range cattle operations were common in northwest Colorado prior to the 1880s, but Steamboat Springs and its allure of free land drew a hopeful and unique group to the area—homesteaders. These hardy settlers braved heavy snows and long winters. The life was not easy, and some ultimately sold their parcels. The folks who remained started family ranching traditions that continue to this day.

Many of those who stayed were the ancestors of current multi-generational ranchers and farmers who continue to raise cattle, sheep, and wheat. Routt County is well-known for its high quality grass hay, one of the region's principal agriculture commodities.

arts and culture

The citizens of Steamboat Springs have supported arts, culture, and learning since the town's beginning. Visionary leaders founded a public library, opened a public school, and promoted the arts. Starting in 1915, summer students from all over the nation journeyed to Steamboat Springs to attend Perry-Mansfield Performing Arts School and Camp, the oldest continuous operation of its type in the U.S. The town's galleries, performances, library, museums, and schools reflect an ongoing commitment to culture.

skiing heritage: ski town u.s.a.®

Winters in Steamboat Springs could be long with heavy snows that often made travel difficult. People in the area relied on skis to get to where they needed to go. When Carl Howelsen arrived in Steamboat Springs in 1913, the ski jumper from Norway introduced residents to the sports of skiing and ski jumping.

The winter fun has continued, and since 1915, Howelsen Hill has held awe-inspiring Winter Carnival stunts and competitions. Storm Mountain, known today as Mount Werner, opened in 1963, launching the world-class ski resort that attracts winter enthusiasts from around the world.

For locals and visitors alike, there is nothing like Ski Town U.S.A.® and its trademark Champagne Powder.® Today, Steamboat Springs prides itself with the distinction of producing more Olympic athletes than any other town in North America.

natural landscape

Ute Indians traveled to the Yampa Valley because of the abundant game, fish, plants, and the local mineral springs during summer months.

Today, people still come to the valley seeking the same outdoor pursuits and often follow the trails of the region's earliest travelers.
